Saw Sam Reber at the office this morning. Talked to him about the sad matter of his resigning from the Foreign Service. Afterwards, Tommy, Bob Joyce and he went off to discuss the outlines for a possible Saar settlement.

E., Audrey and I took a TWA Constellation at 2:45 from Orly and arrived at the Rome airport three hours later after a quiet flight. Cold lunch on board.

We had dinner at Ranieri's Restaurant and renewed acquaintance with the good Soave-Bertani wine of 1949. Audrey has the mulligrubs. She ate something in Normandy last week which has thoroughly poisoned her. We are staying at the Excelsior.
